STANFORD, KY., TUESDAY, DECEMBER 29, 1891.

NO. 86

Newsy Letter From Harrodsburg.

—Born to the wife of Mr. Tullius Witherspoon, nee Miss Mary C. Davis, a girl. Crit is the proudest grandfather in town.

—Mrs. Patsy McAfee, aged 87, died at her home on Lexington street, Saturday morning, of pneumonia. In the last six months six of the oldest ladies in town have died—Mrs. Patsy Smedley, aged 93, Mrs. Nimrod Harris, 82, Mrs. Sarah Davis, 78, Mrs. Susan Walker, 82, Miss America Pulliam, 81, and Mrs. McAfee, 87.

—On Thursday, about midnight, fire broke out in the store room of D. L. Moore, occupied by J. W. Robinson, known as the Mammoth Clothing House, and the building and entire contents were consumed. The stock was valued at about $20,000. The origin of the fire is unknown, but it is supposed that it was caused by fire being left in the stove. The building was insured for $50,000 and the stock for $14,000 in four or five different companies. The little soda fountain engine was called out, but did no good, as usual, except to keep the fire from spreading.

—Miss Dixie Bohon, of this place, who has been living in Pineville for some time, will be married to Mr. Tucker, a Chicago capitalist, (who has large interests at Pineville) where they met each other, at the Methodist church here at high noon, Tuesday, 29th. There will be ten bridesmaids. All will be dressed in white with red gloves, slippers and flowers except the maid of honor, Miss Minnie Bohon, who will be dressed entirely in red. After the ceremony the bridal party will have lunch at Mrs. W. P. Smith's, when the newly married couple will leave for Chicago, their future home. Miss Bohon is one of the most popular young ladies of this place, very handsome and highly educated and Mr. Tucker is to be congratulated on his good fortune in securing such a worthy bride.

—The boys and negroes had a lively time here Christmas night. Several were shot with pistols, a number were knocked in the head with rocks and nearly every young man in town bears evidence in the shape of a burn of having been shot with Roman candles. Harrodsburg is undoubtedly the toughest town in the State for its size. The negroes here are meaner, tougher and more thieving than anywhere else in the State and unless they are put down from the high horse they are now riding, there will be no living in the town in a few years. At any time day or night at least 50 stalwart negroes can be seen standing on the street corners or lounging in store doors and windows, with no visible means of support and it is a well-known fact that most, if not all of them, live by stealing. Something ought to be done.

—Some time ago Dr. J. O. Dedman heard some one prowling around his premises and securing a pistol he went out to investigate and found a negro man deliberately chopping up and carrying off some lumber he had stacked upon a vacant lot. He called to him and inquired what he was doing and receiving a very rough answer fired on him. Next morning a trail of blood was found leading from the place, but he was unable to find out who it was he had shot until a few days ago, when John Allen, one of the elite of the colored population, sent for a doctor and said he had a very bad case of rheumatism. He refused to be examined, however, and not until an officer was informed and compelled him would he submit to an examination. The physician found that the ball had entered his hip and ranged upward and he was in a very precarious condition. The negroes say he was crazy, if he was stealing, but the white population are disposed to think he has been a thief all his life and was caught for the first time just by being shot.

Carl Brehm's "Ten Nights in a Bar-Room" company scored a big success in their presentation of the old play at the Opera House on Saturday evening. The good words given in the towns in which they had appeared before reaching here; the fine appearance and the excellent music of their handsomely uniformed brass band and the reputation of Mr. Brehm as a manager, combined to fill the house. The large audience was not disappointed, as the performance was first-class, with not a poor character in the cast. The music of the large orchestra was also an enjoyable feature. Should the company fill a return date here, a crowded house is assured.—The Courier, Conneautville, Pa.

LANCASTER, GARRARD COUNTY.

LANCASTER, Dec. 28, 12 M.—(Special).—Judge Robinson overruled the application for vote on local option.

LOUIS LAKEDRAM.

—On Christmas eve, sometimes during the night, the lock on the front door of the National Bank was broken off and the door somewhat defaced. Nothing was missed from the inside and the supposition is that some "frolicsome oyster" did it to have a little fun. Such fun don't pay.

—The remains of Miss Patsy Baker, daughter of Abner Baker, who died in this county many years ago, were brought to Lancaster on Sunday evening and interred in the Cemetery Monday morning. She had been on a visit to relatives in Florida for her health but died there soon after her arrival. She was a member of the Presbyterian church and appropriate religious services were held at the grave by Rev. J. R. Tercy.

—The New York Press, the leading republican paper of that city, says that it is in a position to announce that there is not now and that there never has been one moment of antagonism between the president and the secretary of state. That the trend of events now seems to indicate that the demand is for Mr. Blaine, and that he will have the cordial support of the president.

—Walker Tevis, of Kirksville, was here a few days last week. E. K. Higgins has returned to Crab Orchard. Wade Bush, of St. Louis, and Clyde Her-ring, of Louisville, spent Christmas with the home folks. John Marrs came up to spend a few days with his mother and the home folks. John has been clerking in one of the leading hotels of Knoxville for the past two years and we are glad to say that he has been enjoying the best of health and has a good position. "Thomond" Anderson, of Brodhead, was here last week. R. Graham Frank, of the Bible College at Lexington, came home for Christmas turkey. He will return after the holidays.

—The Christmas eve entertainment at the Presbyterian church was a decided success. Mrs. R. A. Burnside presided at the organ and the exercises, under the supervision of Mrs. Thomas Wherritt, Misses Lizzie Walker and Carrie Woods, assisted by Miss Eliza Lusk and Rev. J. R. Tercy, the pastor, were well rendered and highly entertaining. The recitations of Misses Alice Young, Nellie Royston, Ora Ray, Margaret Mason, Mary Landram, Laura Doty and C. W. Young, were excellent, as was the duet of Mattie Walker and Bertha Burnside. Mr. Louis Walker made a splendid Santa Claus and numerous gifts were distributed under his supervision.

—Mr. George Vanderbilt, of New York, has purchased property in the mountain regions near Asheville, N. C., and is erecting a house of a peculiar kind, the total cost of the building and ground being three or four millions of dollars. The basement walls of the house are from 12 to 15 feet thick, and it is thought that his reason for this extraordinary precaution is the belief that the anarchists and socialists will at no distant period make a raid upon the millionaires, and these basement walls might serve him as a fortress. He is able to employ a company, or even a regiment, to protect his castle, and to stock it with sufficient provisions to stand a siege of an indefinite period. He has not announced when he will betake himself to his fortification.

—The elegant masked entertainment given by Miss Maye Hughes on Christmas eve was well attended and the guests were delighted with their reception. The various characters were represented as follows: Miss Nell Marrs, Snow-flake; Pattie Beazley, Snow-flake; Bessie Marksbury, Queen of Spades; Mamie Curry, bride; Maggie Jennings, Snow; Eliza Lusk, Night; Carrie Curry, Night; Annie Hale, Red Riding Hood; Clara Lackey, Mother Hubbard; Ada Farra, Maud Muller; Sallie Elkin, Lap-lander; Mattie Elkin, Girl of the Period; Annie Royston, Mexican Senorita; Ad-die Burnside, Gypsy; Kate Landram, Highland Mary; Ollie Marrs, Sunflower; Ellen Owsley, Hunting Girl; Allie Anderson, Folly; Bettie Anderson, Red Bird; Nell Johnston, Nun; Mamie Stormes, Queen; Maye Hughes, Grecian Lady; Sara Marrs, Joan of Arc; Sue Her-ring, Fisher Maiden; Jennie Burnside, Fairy; Bessie Burnside, Flower Girl; Lottie Borden, Goddess of Liberty; Carrie Woods, Tamborine Girl; Luia Batson, Musician; Bessie Bush, Grand-ma; Mae Ware, Mother Goose; Altie Marksbury, Black Diamond; Letta Brown, Myrtle; Kate Walden, Butterfly; Maria Cook, Rainbow; Bessie Wherritt, Greek Maid; Florence Anderson, Indian Girl; John Kerby, Crazy Woman; Ernest Brown, Japanese Girl; Kirt Kerby, Captain; Hugh Grant, Indian Chief; Mort Rothwell, George Washington; Eph Brown, Private; Howard Marrs, Colonel; Sam Harris, Lieutenant; John Anderson, Duke; John Doty, Duke of Wellington; Letcher Owsley, Henry VIII; Claude Wherritt, Page; Homer Batson, Little Lord Fauntleroy; Charlie Walker, Milk Maid; Louis Walker, Cow-boy; Bert

Spencer, Scottish Chief; Will Dunlap, Burns; Fleece Robinson, Country Girl; Mr. Owens, Page; Albert Severance, Romeo; Brad Jennings, Fashionable Coon; Rob Hughes, Souvenir Spoon; Ashbrook Frank, Bashful Man; John Stormes, Uncle Sam; Charley Anderson, Devil; John Farra, Duke of Buckingham; Wade Bush, Modern Man; Elb Higgins, Priest; Bob West, Othello; Mr. Nichols, English Duke; Jesse Sweeney, Sailor Boy; John Lear, Frenchman; Da-e Walker, Santa Claus.

THEY ARE THE FAD NOW.

The Misses Webbing Very Popular in New York Society.

Wealthy Americans, especially wealthy New Yorkers, have of late years devoted a good deal of attention to parlor entertainments. In this they have followed the lead of London society and there has come into being a class of amusement caterers whose province lies wholly in the line of catering to the demand for parlor entertainments on both sides of the water. To this class belong Marshal P. Wilder and Mrs. Shaw, the beautiful whistler. The latest success in this line in New York are the Misses Webbing, English girls who have already won a place in London.

This custom came into vogue some eight or ten years ago, and no less a person than Dolly Tennant, now Mrs. Henry Stanley, set the fashion. At that time there was a family of three little girls, ranging from about seven to ten years of age, all remarkable for their grace and beauty. They were friends of Miss Tennant, but poor, and it was she who suggested to them to give a little entertainment in her parlor, and so it was that the now famous Webbing sisters were launched. Lord Londonderry, Oscar Wilde, Ruskin and other notable lights of London were present. Josephine, the eldest of the children, recited Shelley's ode to the skylark. Her quaint little mannerisms captivated the audience, and when the other little tots, Peggy and Rosalind, had finished their small parts, their future in the drawing rooms of England's great people was assured.

Even the Princess of Wales took a fancy to the young ladies—the eldest was now sixteen—and they visited her at Sandringham, where they played scenes from Shakespeare before the royal pair. One of the younger children made a decided hit when the Prince of Wales asked her age and she informed his royal highness that it was impolite to ask a young lady such a question. A royal flush preceded a hearty laugh, in which every one joined. The princess has always been kind to her young friends, and always greets them when riding in the park with a cordial bow. after royalty had smiled on the Misses Webbing, their position before society was forever established, and if anything could have added to their fame it came shortly after when Sir John Cowell, master of the queen's household, called them to Osborne to perform before her majesty the queen.

About this time a younger sister—Lucy—aged seven, made her debut at the lord mayor's. Within two weeks Lucy Webbing was known as the prettiest child in England, and a firm of London photographers were accumulating a fortune through the sale of her picture. A story is told that when Mrs. Burnett was dramatizing "Fauntleroy" she strolled into the photographer's shop and saw the child's picture on the wall. "That is the child I want for 'Fauntleroy,'" she said, but she was informed that the child belonged to a private family. Some time after this, however, while the play was running, another child was needed, and the managers made Lucy an offer, and she called on Mrs. Burnett to see if she was satisfactory. Mrs. Burnett was standing in her parlor talking to Wilson Barrett when the child entered. "My ideal!" she exclaimed. "Child, you are the one I wanted first." And Lucy played "Fauntleroy" 500 times before Mrs. Burnett wrote "Nixey" for her, and lost nearly £2,000 in four weeks of matinees. People went to see Lucy pour out tea in the play, but the play was wretched and failed to draw as well as the tea.

TRAVELS OF A STAR.

A French Astronomer Makes Remarkable Observations by the Naked Eye.

A communication from M. Camille Flammarion, the French astronomer, in the New York Herald mentions his discovery at Juvisy observatory of the movement of a star by the naked eye. This is the first time in the history of astronomy, he says, that the displacement of a star has been settled without instrumental aid.

The star to which he refers shines beneath the brilliant star "Cluster" in the constellation of the Virgo. It is numbered sixty-one and is of the fifth magnitude. Hipparchus described it two thousand years ago as a double star. It was then optically double, only not physically connected with another star. But it is no longer double even in appearance. It was in the attempt to ascertain the stellar parallax by the study of double stars that the elder Herschel found evidence of the great law that the dominion of gravitation extends beyond the limits of the solar system to the most remote regions of space.

Star atlases constructed by M. Flammarion and others show that not infrequently many stars in the same region of the heavens travel in company, or exhibit, as one says, a "gregarious tendency." It is not often, therefore, that any change in the relative positions of stars can be detected. But when the star is in line of sight observations with the spectroscopic make it possible to determine its rate of approach or recession. More than twenty years ago Huggins found by this means that Arcturus was approaching us at a speed of sixty miles a second, while Sirius was increasing his distance by nearly a third as much per second.

Star sixty-one in the constellation of the Virgo was once near star sixty-three, forming with it, apparently, a double star. Now it is separated, says M. Flammarion, "by a distance exceeding by far that of the full moon, and it is flying with a rapid course to the southwest and preparing itself to abandon the Virgo, its arm and its 'Cluster,' to go and lose itself in the folds of Hydra, which unveil themselves in the south."

A Dangerous Crisis.

A gentleman who was last winter in the south relates that upon one occasion he went with some friends to a colored service, says the Boston Courier. At the close of the sermon a contribution was taken up, and as the plate was passed to him he dropped into it a silver half dollar, meaning this to do for the whole party. The colored deacon who was passing the plate regarded it an instant with a stupefied air, and then said in a hoarse whisper: "Take out dat ar silver." "Isn't it enough?" the gentleman asked, much amused. "Lor' bless yer," responded the deacon, "we don't put silver into dis yer plate. Dat old nigger preacher get so puffed up dat we uns couldn't lib wid him, noway." The argument was too convincing to be resisted, especially as by this time the whole congregation was watching the colloquy between the deacon and the stranger, and the gentleman hastily exchanged a handful of pennies for the silver piece. The deacon passed on smiling, with the air of a man who had skillfully brought the church bark past a dangerous rapid.

The stupendous exhibition of practical politics and of the doctrine that the victors belong the spoils was too much even for Speaker Crisp and he had to go to bed immediately after announcing his committee. His leading competitor, Mr. Mills, was not only shamefully ignored, but nearly every man who voted for him was punished. Of the 110 men who voted in caucus for Crisp 47 got chairmanships and the others the best assignments. The advancement of so smooth a bore as Montgomery at the expense of Breckinridge and reducing Gov. McCreary to a private on the committee on Foreign Affairs, when by every sense of reason, justice and desert he should have been placed at its head, shows that Mr. Crisp is a very small man and not equal to the work expected of him. The result of so narrow-minded a policy must result in factional fights and the frittering away of the good results that might grow out of the tremendous democratic majority in Congress. Crisp has made a bad beginning and already demonstrated that he will not be a worthy successor of John G. Carlisle, the fairest and most conservative Speaker who ever presided over the American Congress.

Mr. E. W. Newman, writing from Washington to the Courier-Journal, says there is very little drinking among Congressmen and others compared with former times, and adds that the day of the drunkards is past in this country, that drunkards no longer fill the halls of Congress; drunkards do not operate our railroads, direct our banks, make our newspapers, write our literature, expound our laws and morals. The man who would be a ruler in Israel in this day must be a ruler of his appetite for drink. This is gratifying indeed. Drunkards are fit for nothing else but to drink whisky. Nobody wants them in business, they ought not to be permitted to have office and society ought not to tolerate them. Touch not, taste not, handle not is the safest and best plan.

Miss Sadie Brown, of Birmingham, made her lover, Wm. Reese, a Christ mass present of a revolver. The next day they quarreled over a trivial matter, when the brute drew the pistol and blew her brains out. We won't say that the poor girl deserved her fate, but a pistol is the last present any person should bestow. Like a gun, it is dangerous without lock, stock or barrel and makes a coward of a man after he carries it a while, even if he had some claim to nerve before.

The Indiana coal miners, after losing fully a million dollars by their strike, have offered to return to work at the old figures, but the operators having lost their market are not sure that they can give them steady employment. How long will it take the laboring class to learn that strikes are not the proper means for gaining their points, but that arbitration and compromise is the more manly and business-like way.

It is not often that a man condemned to be hanged dies a natural death while awaiting the execution of the judgment against him, but Isaac Sawtelle, of Concord, N. H., furnishes an exception. He died of apoplexy Saturday. It will be remembered that he killed his brother to get possession of his money by cutting off his head, which he took to Maine and hid in order to raise doubt as to what State the murder was committed in.

GEN. CASTLEMAN addresses his call for a caucus to the "democratic members-elect" of the general assembly. It will be held to-night to nominate officers and independent and unguessed will be given a cold shoulder, as they should be. A rautankerous republican has as much right in a democratic caucus as Tom Pettit and men of his ilk.

A LEANON, TENN., court has been guilty of the absurdity of sentencing a man to two life terms in two separate cases and in two others of eight and ten years respectively. It would seem that a person guilty of so much devilry ought to have been more expeditiously disposed of at the end of a rope.

THE Louisville Times contains a good picture of Col. Silas Adams, the silent man from Casey, who will to-morrow begin his second term as representative from his county and Russell. There are few better men in either party than Col. Adams and pity it is that there are not more like him to make our laws.

THE Boston barber who beat his wife's brains out because she would not give him more room in bed, ought to be given all the room he wants in hades, shol gehenna, hell or whatever you call it p. d. q. His room on earth is far more desirable than his company.

—Christmas day was celebrated in Harrodsburg as follows: Lee Bennett was shot in the arm by Abe Bridges. A railroad man was shot by unknown parties. George Mosby was shot in the abdomen by Abe Card and cannot recover.

THE BRIDE-GROOM
Forgets Not His "Old Love" While on With The New.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26.—The excitement of an event which took place at Hustonville a few days ago, in which I had the honor of playing quite a prominent role, has hardly died away sufficiently for me to resume the newspaper work, but I shall endeavor notwithstanding to give a few notes I carelessly jotted down on the trip from Moreland to Washington.

Of course the C. S. train was late on the day we left and it was my good pleasure to be held over an hour or so with good friends, whose congratulatory remarks, still ringing in my ears. Then, too, it afforded the funny man a most excellent opportunity to get off his jokes which for the most part he made me the butt of. It is remarkable what a great number of funny men there are still left in the country and it is proof conclusive to me that Barnum and the other great showmen failed to do their duty in their search for rare collections.

The C. S. train maintained its well established reputation for being behind time and it was sufficiently late to make us lose the connection for Washington, and the consequence was we were obliged to take an accommodation train instead of the great "Fast Flying Virginian." We were some 24 hours on the road from Cincinnati, but had we made connection at the latter place, would have made the trip in less than 20.

The route from Cincinnati to Ashland was new country to me and revealed quite a number of towns of which I knew but little. It isn't a Blue-grass route, by a long shot, but on the contrary, runs through a rather poor portion of the State. The railroad sticks close to the Ohio river bank and the two great modes of travel can be seen side by side. From the number of boats that ply the Ohio at present one would conclude that a big business is being done, but I was informed that the steamers are run principally for freight and that the number of passengers who choose that delightful way of travel is exceedingly small.

We passed through several boom towns en route to Washington, but like those of Kentucky, they are about as dead as a door nail. Kenova, named for the States of Kentucky, Ohio and Virginia, some five miles from Catlettsburg, is the liveliest one of them, but even that place shows clearly that its race is run.

That Christmas was not far off, I was thoroughly impressed, as we came through the little mining towns of West Virginia. At each of these places our train was greeted by loud and prolonged bells which showed very significantly that the hardy miners either had Christmas in their bones or a pretty fair supply of bug juice on hand. They were quite orderly, however, and were merely "celebrating" among themselves.

The C. & O., which, by the way, is the best equipped road in the country, runs through some extremely picturesque scenery, not surpassed greatly even by that found among the Rockies. The building of the road through so mountainous a country, as well as a poor country, required a remarkable amount of nerve, as well as money, but it has proved a paying investment. Managed by officers and directors of experience and ability and manned by the cleverest lot of gentlemen who ever pulled a bell-cord or turned a brake, the C. & O., under the new regime, is a success indeed and deserves the praise it receives from its patrons.

We arrived in Washington at sunrise on Christmas morning, just as the children were searching their little stockings to see what Santa Claus brought them, and the gay urchin ran from door to door with the oft-heard exclamation of "Christmas gift." The firing of cannon and the tooting of horns was heard, but save that it looked like any other than Christmas time in the capital city. The Congressmen, Senators and traveling population generally had gone home to eat Christmas turkey and the city really had on its mourning garb.

Christmas day was a dark, dreary one, and I spent it for the most part in hotel lobbies. The usual amount of political gossip is going on, but sufficient time is taken for an occasional "Merry Christmas," "Happy New Year" and the like. The gossips also find time to go for a glass of egg-nog occasionally, which flows freely at the hotels on Christmas day. The Ebbitt, where we are located, made barrel after barrel, and many an old lobbyist's knees smote one against the other ere the day had passed.

I celebrated Christmas day by calling at the White House. I suppose Mr. Harrison was not in, as a large sign across the door read "Closed." I shall go again to-morrow and if the sign is not taken down, will see what the trouble is with the little man with the big hat.

I ran across Jim Jones, from London, this A. M. He has become a Washingtonian and was certainly in the swim when I saw him. A Congressman on either arm and a long Prince Albert coat adorning his well-turned body, the republican politician was in the fight sure enough.

I notice no change in the capital since I was here last, nor have any of the large public buildings moved their sites. Washington's monument is also standing where it was and in fact I see little or no change since I, in my feeble way, attempted to write up the place some four years ago. E. C. W.

HUSTONVILLE.

—The holidays thus far have passed without incident, out of regular routine. Egg nog, Thomas and Jeremiah, plum-pudding and mince pies, have no serious indiscretions entered on the debit columns of their accounts, while foolish fireworks are responsible for neither stampede nor conflagration.

—James B. Green was handsomely remembered by his Sunday-school at Moreland. A magnificent crazy quilt, of different fine goods, each square containing the donor's name in needlework, and a pair of head rests by two of the charter members, who had married and moved from Moreland, and couldn't find room in the quilt for a square, were entrusted to St. Nicholas for delivery and the complimentary and affectionate note accompanying the tribute to his piety, zeal and long continuance in his good works, which have so bountifully borne fruits, of which Moreland and vicinity are extremely proud, will always be proudly treasured.

—John C. Frye, of Plano, Texas, arrived Wednesday on a visit to Kentucky relatives. Mr. Frye emigrated from the West End in the fall of '84 and this is his first visit. Miss Lena Woods, of Garrard, is visiting her sister, Mrs. John Reid. George Weatherford was down from Richmond. James W. Jameson, of Lebanon, a former landmark of this city, is here on a visit to friends. Miss Maria Cooke and her brother William, of Garrard, left for home Friday. Miss Georgie McAfee left Friday on a visit to her brother Will, of Hanging Fork's lower waters. Sam Peacock has arrived, after a prolonged trip working up a trade as oculist, and he handles a better line of goods than anybody in the business. W. W. Evans, of Williamsburg, is here for a short stay, attracted by one of the irresistible magnets, for which this end is particularly famous. Jack Weatherford, of Chicago, is here visiting his brother, Geo., whom he hadn't seen in 25 years. Mrs. R. J. Lyles and Miss Helen Reid went to Lexington to visit their cousin, Mrs. Dr. Lee Huffman. Billy Staggs has had a ten days' struggle with the grip and rheumatism, which have tinged his Christmas a navy blue, whilst his peepers and proboscis are pronouncedly a turkey red.

—The Christian church was crowded Christmas eve, notwithstanding the inclemency of both weather and comments of a few neighboring exemplars of morality and religious propriety, who took occasion to pound the pulpits and claw the air in their tirades against the wicked fiction of Santa Claus regularly shipping down chimneys on Christmas eve, with a sleigh-load of nice presents for good little boys and girls. But we have come to expect as a matter of course that a goodly number of our "Thank-God-I'm-better-than-you" kind will turn back in the face in their painful efforts to swallow an ordinary farm gate, whilst they "worry down" a full-fledged saw-mill with the ease and gusto that a regular installment from their private jugs is on the sly taken for the stomach's sake (?) Bah! But the chimney, to have been, grew to the proportions of an immense smoke-stack and the charmingly cheery and witty manner in which Billy Williams as old Santa tore down and distributed the materials of the towering structure inspired universal hopes, in that big crowd, that Santa's periodical visits will cease only when old Earth has been dropped from the planetary system and dissipated through space in atomic pigments. Three times three cheers and a tiger for St. Nicholas and confusion confounded to every carping opponent are the sentiments of all our good children.

H. T. BUSH,

REAL ESTATE AGENT,

Stanford, Ky.

I have quite a number of FARMS for sale of the very best Blue-Grass lands in Lincoln county. These Farms are all well improved and good rich lands, running in size from 50 to 500 Acres. Considering their locality, their richness and fertility of soil, the convenience of turnpikes and railroads that bring markets right to our door, they are cheaper than the lands of any other county in the State. There is scarcely a Farm in the country over 5 miles from a depot.

The county is checked with turnpikes running in every direction. There is not a public road entering the county seat that is not Macadamized. We have the Knoxville Branch of the L. & N. R. R., dividing the county from East to West and the S. & K. R. from North to South; the C. & O. R. R. from this place to Cincinnati, crossing the C. & O. at Winchester, giving full access to the markets of the whole world. Besides, we have three large Flour Mills in the county that give us a market for all our grain right at home; and the development of the mountain regions of Eastern and Southern Kentucky by railroads that give us a direct South by railroads has created such a demand for all kinds of cereals and provisions that we can scarcely retain enough for home consumption. The people are prosperous, generous and kind, believing in Christianity and education. There is not a neighborhood in the county but has a good church and school-house.

Stanford, the county seat of Lincoln, is a prosperous little city of about 2,500 inhabitants and is the great doorway from the North and Northwest to the South and the Southeast, and standing as it does going right into the bosom of the undeveloped mountains of Southeastern Kentucky backed up by the whole Blue-Grass region of the State with railroads running through it to all points of the compass, makes it naturally one of the best located towns in the South for manufactures and other enterprises of magnitude. Water Works are now being agitated and right about the town about three-fourths of a mile there could be erected Water Works with very little cost that would supply a city of 150,000 inhabitants with the purest and best water in the world. Our little city has been newly rebuilt in the last few years and its business houses and residences will compare with larger cities of greater pretensions. Our merchants and tradesmen are all prosperous and doing well. We have two banks with a capital stock of $400,000 that are prosperous and in a good condition.

We have splendid schools. We have a Female College, a large brick building, with over 100 pupils in attendance and under the principalship of Prof. J. M. Hubbard, is in a flourishing condition. We also have a Seminary that is a good school, with Prof. B. F. Blakeman at its head. We have one of the best Public School buildings in this section of the State, with over 100 pupils in attendance, and with other good private schools, you see our school facilities are excellent.

We have elegant church buildings, representing every denomination, with a full corps of ministers of fine class talent and are doing a better business than any class of men in the city.

I have tried to make this statement as facts, without any exaggeration or coloring, as those who know will bear me out, and those who wish to buy pleasant homes at fair prices and locate among a good people with all the best surroundings, would do well to call and see me before purchasing elsewhere.

CITY AND VICINITY.

WANTED, 500 Turkeys. M. F. Elkin & Co.

The freight and passenger depot at Jellico burned Thursday night.

HARRISON WEAREN was seriously burned by fooling with powder Christmas eve.

The Presbyterian Sunday-school scholars greatly enjoyed the fun of fishing for presents in a tub of bran and all went away with something and correspondingly happy.

A COTTAGE on Hustonville street and two rooms in my residence for rent. J. R. Alford.

Big line of sample shoes just received. Call and get the best bargain you ever secured. B. F. Jones, Sr.

DAY BOARDERS WANTED, and one furnished room with board, at Mrs. Kate Dudderat's, on Lancaster street.

LOST.—A black cashmere shawl between Mr. R. C. Warren's and the Presbyterian church, Friday night. Mgs. Stephen Burch.

A COLD snap succeeded a warm Christmas day and Sunday and yesterday were bright and crisp. "Warmer, fair" is the prediction for to-day.

THE Lancaster concert to-night, "Ten Nights in a Bar Room" Friday night, and "Uncle Josh Spruceby," Saturday night, ought to give our people enough amusement for the week.

INCENDIARIES are again at work in Danville. Another attempt to burn business houses was made Christmas night, but the blaze was discovered in time to prevent a conflagration.

Those indebted to me will confer a great favor by calling and settling without having to be dunned. I need the money to carry on my business and must have it by Jan. 1, or sooner. H. C. Ruple.

A FINE brass band and orchestra go with "Ten Nights in a Bar Room" and furnish excellent music. At 2 o'clock Friday the band will give a street parade worth seeing. Come and take it in, along with the show at night.

THIS has been the quietest Christmas we ever saw in Stanford. There has been no disturbance worth mentioning and so far we have seen no drunken men. This is an enviable record, which it is hoped we will always maintain.

CONCERT.—The Lancaster Record says of Prof. Koester's concert, to be given at Walton's Opera House to-night: The programme will consist of several overtures by the well-trained orchestra and vocal, violin and piano solos by the professor himself, H. W. Batson, Misses Nelle Johnston, Lulu Batson and Maye Hughes, together with a recitation by Miss Ollie Marrs.

Mrs. A. D. REID writes from Richmond: "I wish you would please say for me through your paper that I am very grateful to the good people of Stanford and those others of the county who took so much interest in my work while I was there, for their help, and I am especially grateful to you and the young ladies and gentlemen who so kindly assisted me."

We have recently bought a complete stock of groceries, hardware, queensware, woodenware, &c., and come before the public with every article new and fresh from the cities, and as we have no old stock to carry, we will endeavor to make prices that will be to the interest of everybody to call on us. With our past experience in the business we think we know what the trade requires. Call on us, next door to post-office. Will be ready for business Dec. 31st. McKinney Bros.

The Christian church was filled Sunday to hear the farewell sermon of Rev. John Bell Gibson, and the audience was amply repaid by an eloquent, touching and earnest sermon from Philippians 1:27. He exhorted the church to unity and brotherly love and complimented it for having so fully put aside the differences and disagreements that once divided it and from wielding little or no influence to have become the most influential church in the section. In closing he referred to the fact that seven years ago he had come among us, an inexperienced youth, just from college, that the members had taken him up and seeing that he was determined to succeed, both as a preacher and pastor, had stood by him till his pastorate had lasted longer than any other in his church of 17 years, save that of Bros. Darsie, of Frankfort, and Sweeney, of Paris. The unpleasantness that existed between some of the brethren then had disappeared and the church now was a thoroughly united one with a very large membership, a live prayer meeting and an excellent Sunday-school, the latter he had never failed to attend, except the Sunday after his marriage, when he thought he ought to have been excused. During the first year of his pastorate the membership increased 96 and during the seven years 260 or more. It was asked frequently why he wanted to leave a church doing so well. His answer was, first because he wished to do so while the flag was up and while unity and brotherly love prevailed, and second because he wished to teach a few years and at the same time devote his spare hours to a further preparation for his life work. The happiest moments of his life had been spent around the hearthstones of the members and the recollections of them would always occupy the brightest place in his heart. He then exhorted the brethren to meet and encourage Bro. Ellis, the incoming pastor as they had him, and bade the congregation a heartfelt, loving and tender farewell. There were many tearful eyes as he said these words and many deep regrets that so pleasant and profitable church intercourse had ended.

THE Uncle Josh Spruceby Co., booked for next week writes to change its date to Jan. 2, which has been done.

WE have just received twenty-five pieces of carpet, also new lot of rugs and oil cloths. Severance & Son.

J. D. ANDERSON is building a store-room and residence corner Main and New pike and will open a grocery store.

AFTER paying juries, &c., Trustee of the Jury Fund, B. G. Alford, tells us that he will turn into the State Treasury, Jan. 1, $1,490, collected from license, fines, forfeitures, &c.

Go to the New Cash Store to find the best importation of Hamburg, India linen and Swiss embroideries, plain and plaid India linens, lawn stripes, dimity, &c., &c., best ever exhibited in Stanford. These goods are to be sold from five cents to 50 cents per yard. Come to see them. J. S. Hughes.

A GREAT MUSICAL TREAT!—The concert to be given this (Tuesday) evening at the Opera House, by Prof. Raphael Koester will be enjoyed by old and young people alike. The musical bill of fare is most excellent and of great variety. Let everybody attend and enjoy the sweet music. General admission 25c, reserved seats 35c at McRoberts drug store.

They say Ingalls has too much appreciation of the fitness of things to want the appointment of Senator from Kansas after his defeat by the representatives of the people, but that's too iridescent to even dream on. He'll not only take it, but is praying for the lightning to strike him. The eye of the governor though, is said to be fixed on Ben Simpson, a stalwart republican, to whom he owes his election as the chief executive.

THE Danville reporter for the daily papers is an enterprising youth, at least he seems to be out for the stuff. He got an item a week old about the killing of young Paul at Harriman, Tenn., from this paper, and telegraphed it to the Courier-Journal Sunday and a few days ago worked the Enquirer with one more than a year old about Harvey McAnich, of Casev, paying a couple of sharks $400 for an alleged gold brick, which turned out to be the poorest kind of brass.

NOTWITHSTANDING the ordinance prohibiting the sale and the shooting of fire crackers and other explosives, there was nearly a continual volley all night Thursday. There were no arrests, and people who own property, which was seriously endangered by the reckless use of fire works, are asking if we really have night police protection or not? We are for giving the boys one night in the year, but after the council had ordered otherwise it should have seen that the order was obeyed if it took every man in town to enforce it.

MATRIMONIAL MATTERS.

—W. B. McKinney, 21, and Mattie Susan Aker, 16, were married Sunday.

—Frank Crabtree and Nannie Wren celebrated Christmas by getting married.

—George Yeach, of Danville, and Miss Mattie Ferrill, of Garrard, were married in Harrodsburg.

—Thomas W. Haley, 21, and Miss Nellie Woods, 16, eloped from Somerset to Tennessee and were married.

—Mr. George Lawson, of this county, and Miss Jennie Moore, of Garrard, were married in Danville last week.

—Miss Bessie Broadbush, of Madison, who used to go to the college here, was married this week to Mr. J. T. Embury.

—Miss Birdelle Bedford, a very lovely young lady of Frankfort, who has visited here, will become the bride Jan. 6, of Julius A. Stege, of Louisville.

—Washington seems to be the mecca for bridal parties and this is an exceedingly popular season of the year for them. This morning in the East Room of the White House seven couples were counted, and their was no mistaking them either.—Cor. Lon. Times, 26th. Were Ed and Belle among them?

CHURCH AFFAIRS.

—The Central Presbyterian church at Shelbyville burned Saturday. The fire caught from the furnaces. It cost $25,000 and was insured for $10,000.

—Rev. Ben Helm desires to return his thanks through the INTERIOR JOURNAL to the friends who extended to him their Christmas greetings in so substantial a form.

—Col. Duncan writes Mrs. W. G. Welch that Bro. Barnes is about to sail for America and will hold a meeting here on his return if sufficient encouragement is offered.

—Rev. W. E. Arnold was too sick to preach Sunday, but it is hoped that he will be well by next Sunday, when D. V. he will commence a protracted meeting at the Methodist church, during which Prof. E. S. Fogg will assist in the music with the cornet.

—An Ohio evangelist named Hawkins, who had been preaching that the world would come to an end Christmas day and had gotten all his congregation to the mourners' bench, committed suicide Christmas eve, leaving a note saying that he had gone to prepare for their coming.

—Loveman & Co's big dry goods store and other business houses burned at Chattanooga. Loss $650,000, insurance $400,000.

Beginning with the New Year, it is customary to form new resolutions and as far as possible profit by experience of the past. The general credit system having been universally condemned by both debtor and creditor as a curse to our country, one of our young grocery merchants has concluded that it will be wise and profitable to both himself and his customers to steer clear of this reef that has made shipwreck of so many in the past and at the same time offer such inducements to his customers that they can not afford to buy their groceries elsewhere. DEAD IN THE DESERT.

A CHRISTMAS STORY BY ALFRED R. CALHOUN.

[Copyright, 1891, by American Press Association.]

IT WAS the 24th of December, 1870. I was at that time in charge of a division of engineers who were making a survey of the Mojave desert from the Needles on the Great Colorado to Los Angeles on the Pacific.

For a month the officers and men had been eagerly looking forward to spending the Christmas holidays in the beautiful town of San Bernardino, on the other side of the Sierras. On the 23d the wagons, pack mules and all the men, excepting three who remained back to complete some work with myself, crossed the range that separates the Mojave (pronounced Mohav-ee) desert from the flowering and fruitful paradise of southern California.

For six weeks we had been working in the desert, running lines, taking elevations and plotting our work at night by the smoky light of dried creosote and sapsage brush. At times we were sixty miles from the nearest water, and when obtained the water was alkaline. Many of our pack mules, maddened by thirst, broke their ropes and wandered further into the desert to die.

Hard tack and bacon, and not too much of that, had been the only food of the men since we entered the desert, and so the most cheerful became grum, and the skin of the youngest grew dry and parched as that of a mummy.

We did our work in silence; even the officers came to speak in whispers, for our throats were dry and our lips cracked. Everything with moisture in it parched as if in a furnace.

The alkali on the level expanses looked like dazzling snow. The fantastic hills and mesas were crumbling and burning up in the forceful and persistent fires of oxidation. And amid all this the mirage would appear to mock us with lakes and streams in which were reflected the spires, domes and minarets of grand oriental cities, such as might have been built by the geni of architecture.

It was half past 5 in the afternoon, and we hoped to reach the pass by dark, where fresh horses would carry us to the town before midnight and Christmas day.

As our horses staggered on, we saw three vultures rising from a dark object a little to the right. A glance through my field glass revealed the outlines of a prostrate man and horse, stretched out side by side.

Years of this wild life had accustomed us to such sights. Yet as our hearts were full of thoughts of the joyous Christmas days of the past and of the rest, fresh food and water for bathing, which we were to enjoy on the morrow, there was something inexpressibly sad in the presence of death at such a time and at the foot of the purple mountains, beyond which lay Eden.

We reined in our thin, panting horses and dismounted. In that atmosphere no organic substance decays—it shrivels up and becomes as hard and indestructible as the glistening volcanic rocks that surround it; but enough remained to tell us that the horse had once been a noble creature, and the saddle and equipments were such as the wealthy Mexicans of southern California delight in.

The man was of medium height, and the carbine, pistols and knife, still belted about his shrunken waist, indicated ability to resist. He was young. The long, dark hair and the silky mustache, through which the white teeth gleamed, told this. We opened the saddlebags and found $200 in gold, the titles to a lot of California mining lands made out to one "Louis Bolton," and a bundle of letters tied with a blue ribbon.

In the middle of the bundle there were two vignettes—one that of a sweet faced, motherly lady, the other that of a beautiful girl, the name "Dora" at the bottom of the picture being surrounded by a delicately painted wreath of forget-me-nots.

These letters were dated at "The Elms," but, as the envelopes were destroyed, there was nothing to indicate the town, state or land. One read as follows, and, curiously enough, it was dated Christmas eve, a year before:

"My DARLING BOY—I think of you at all times, but on Christmas eve you fill my heart so that I can think of nothing else, and if it were not for Dora, who has come to cheer me, I fear I could not stand it. 'Where is my Louis tonight?' This question haunts me, and I picture you out in the deserts of that wild land, homeless and friendless, still hunting for gold. Ah, my boy, come back! Better poverty than this awful anxiety. But we cannot be poor where there is so much love."

"Nero, grown fat and lazy, lies at my feet as I write. I call your name, 'Louis!' my Louis!" and the dog starts up and STRETCHED SIDE BY SIDE rushes to the door with a joyous bark, but he hears no loved voice or footstep, and he comes back dejected and lies down with a moan. Ah, dear boy! if that dumb brute mourns your absence, how must it be with us?"

And so the letter went on, full of love and gossip and love, till it ended with "Ever and forever, Dora."

We laid the body at the base of a volcanic cliff, and covered it with stones to save it from the vultures, then we distributed the arms and saddlebags, so as to save our horses, and resumed our march for the west, where the peaks of the purple Sierras glowed like mighty fire opals in the light of the setting sun.

We found fresh horses at the pass, and then, although quite tired, we pushed on with all speed for the beautiful town of San Bernardino.

We were out of the desert. The odor of orange blossoms and perennial heliotrope filled the air, and the ripple of water came to our ears whenever we reined in our horses.

There never was such a clear, glorious Christmas eve since the wise men from the east followed the star to Bethlehem and the manger in which lay the Christ child. Lights flashed through the groves, indicating the happy abodes of settlers, and now and then we heard a song that told of home, and the musical laughter of children whose special eve it was.

We found the hotel ablaze with light. There were wreaths and banners over windows and doors. There were flowers and

A WEDDING PRESENT, the faces of beautiful women and handsome men wherever one turned. From the wide parlors came the rhythmic fall of feet and the swell of music.

Here was Eden, but on asking the landlord the reason for these festivities, he replied:

"It is a wedding. Mr. Louis Bolton, whose bride and mother reached here yesterday from the east, was married to-night."

"Louis Bolton?" I repeated, and I thought of the dead man out on the desert.

"Yes; here he is. Let me introduce him."

The landlord introduced me to a tall, handsome young man, and I at once took him to my room and showed him the arms and saddlebags.

As he saw the titles, he threw his arms about my neck, and to my surprise he kissed me and shouted:

"You have brought a wedding present that makes me rich, rich as any honest man wants to be!"

Briefly, Mr. Bolton's papers and much of his ready money had been stolen six months before by a Mexican desperado named Guan Chaniz. The man was chased into the desert where he perished, and so my sympathy was wasted.

I met the dear mother, and I met "Dora" that night, and I drank to their health and prosperity as the church bells rang in Christmas day.

Early Christmas Carols. Christmas carols have been sung ever since the rude tribes of Germany were converted to Christianity. There are books by the score containing hundreds of them. Bishop Taylor observes that the "Gloria in Excelsis," the well known hymn sung by the angels to the shepherds at our Lord's Nativity, was the earliest Christmas carol. Bonnie cites Durandus to prove that in earlier ages of the church the bishops were accustomed on Christmas day to sing carols among their clergy. The original of the Anglo-Norman carol (translated by Donce) of the date Thirteenth century is in the British museum. It begins:

Now, Lordings, listen to our ditty,
Strangers coming from afar;
Let poor minstrels move your pity,
Give us welcome, soothe our care.

In 1531, Wynkin de Warde printed a set of Christmas carols. One of them was "A Carol bryngyng in the Bore's Head." Chaucer alludes to it in his "Franklin's Tale."

James sitteth by the fire with double beard,
And he drinketh of his bugle-horne the wine
Before him standeth the braune of the tusked swine.
